The Celebration. The day was ushered in by a national salute of thirteen guns, one for each of the old thirteen. Notwithstanding the strenuous effort of the hunker Slaveocrats, to prevent the people of the County, and especially those of their own partv. coming to witness the celebration, a large number were in attendance. As very few drunken men were seen thoughout the day, we presume the party behests were obeyed.

The Committee, whose duty it was to provide the speaker's stand, and seats for the audience, had supposed that the efforts of the Nebraska party would have accomplished something, and that few people would be present; therefore, the seats provided proved insufficient to accommodate one-third of the number .-Many of the ladies, even, were compelled to remain standing, and exposed to the sun, or leave the ground. The men were almost without exception, standing the whole time. The committee regret this oversight exceedingly.

After a truly patriotic and eloquent prayer by Elder Bain, the Declaration of Independence was read by J. D. Cox, Esq. Mr. CADWELL, of Jefferson, the orator of the day, then delivered the Oration. Mr. C. briefly alluded to the fact of his having been originally invited to deliver an oration, which should not touch upon the present political state of this Nation, and of his satisfaction in having had all barriers to free speech, removed by the action of the citizens here. The oration was not one of those bombastic, prosy, self-eulogistic, manifestdestiny 4th of July glorifications, whose hollowness is proverbial; but it was one, worthy of the day, suited to the exigencies of the present time, showing that the immortal principles proclaimed by the canonized signers of the declaration, in 1776, were the same principles, which the assembled Republican citizens, had that day met to proclaim and to support. The speaker denounced the slavish cowardly policy, which caused the North to cringe to Southern dictation, showed how eminently fitting was the anniversary of our independence, to be devoted to the same purpose, to which the patriots of '76 had consecrated it, namely, to the maintenance of freedom, and defiance of tyrranny.

The breathless attention with which the address was listened to, notwithstanding the discomfort of the audience, was indubitable evidence of its merit. Mr. CADWELL deserves and has the thanks of our citizens for the masterly effort.

The fire-works in the evening, exceeded anything of the kind ever exhibited in this town, both in quantity and variety of display. For the industry and skill evinced by Mr. F. L. LEROY, he is certainly entitled to great credit. Three balloons made their ascensions in fine style. Balls in the different halls of the town, where flying feet chased the flying hours till morning dawned, terminated the festivities of the occasion. Every thing went off happily.

We can assure our brother of the Democrat that we are perfectly satisfied with the celebration of the 4th, and are glad he is so, [for we suppose we ought to believe him, as he says he is satisfied,) though his looks belied his words, as much as his description of the celebration
